YRAC Schools Brief

Introduction

The institution of education is not benefiting the economy. Gaining an education is perceived to simply be a means to work for someone else. There is not a contributory inclination towards society. The people are piling up wealth that will not benefit them. This is the mindset that we are trained to adopt in education regardless of the field that we study. The state of affairs did not used to be this way. People used to own everything they had and give what was left over to those who had less. People used to have more security and serenity in their demeanor.

The institution of education is not beneficial to the spirit of Human Beings. The situation is now the opposite with very few owning everything they have, very few people are giving in their spirit, therefore, anxiety (the anticipation of losing something) and depression (the disconnectedness with the self and spirit, i.e. forgetting that we are made to play a role in a community) are an epidemic. This is happening because there is no blessing in what we have anymore. There are little to no educational and for profit institutions that base success on something outside of “the bottom line” (the hoarding of wealth). People’s jobs and livelihood are being replaced by computers. The objective for businesses and educational institutions is efficiency in accumulation of wealth. The means in which we approach wealth nowadays is through greed which is based in selfishness which is further based in arrogance. Arrogance is the separation and the elevation of the self without feeling any need or dependency for other being (even God).

YRAC Schools Brief

The educational system and the economy are now normed on arrogance, selfishness, and accumulation of wealth.

Education in America now only stimulates the economy of a select few wealthy individuals. Education used to be something that enlivened the spirit. Education used to be something that people indulged in due to interest and not a means to simply accumulate wealth that will not be shared. Education no longer enlivens the spirit because those who are in positions of leadership in our educational systems are led by and nestle with those whose bottom line is money and not knowledge that benefits humanity. The educational system has now embodied the corporations that hold leverage over it. Students are now simply numbers that churn through the assembly line of education while collecting debt and gaining more dependency on the very businesses that injected debt into our society. We need an educational system that changes what churns out to something positive for all the people.

and service to their surrounding community. We will focus on the most neglected populations of youth in our society: foster youth and orphans. Though foster children and orphans are a desired target that we plan to facilitate to the utmost extent, YRAC schools opens its door to youth of any demographic within the specified age range. We do this to show that an educational system that invests in every child translates to success of the whole community. With our seven pillars of success (stated above) our youth can turn this society towards a philanthropic and humanitarian oriented civilization. To answer the question of what exactly will YRAC Schools produce, we look to the YRAC Schools Pillars of Success.

YRAC Schools' Seven Pillars of Success:

1. Upstanding Moral Principles: this is the base of all our actions in and outside of business. So long as a person acts from upstanding principles, the community will go in a positive direction.
2. Entrepreneurial Leadership: this will turn the economy towards an innovative direction by empowering the youth with the knowledge and resources to generate revenue for themselves and their communities.
3. Leadership Development: every business, organization, and community needs leadership development or else the lack of leadership will be detrimental to the growth and development of the community. 7Shades

- specializes in leadership development and will have a pivotal role in producing leaders and mentors within YRAC Schools.
4. Community Development: this is the context in which the graduates must enter the world as entrepreneurs. The only method of survival for a business, organization, group or community is through a communal connection and positive reciprocation of behavior. This perspective and embodiment of community well being will be the main variable in perpetuating our sustainability.
 5. Cultural Diversity: we will connect with people from all walks of life. We must see and feel other cultures as one with ourselves and our humanity. Getting to know other cultures indeed increases the knowledge and wisdom of the self. This is the community development pillar in its complete form.
 6. Creativity: this will emphasize innovation. While in business, creativity helps to deal with strategic interactions, problem solving, and adding personal awareness of the surroundings. Cultivating creativity will inspire students to build institutions that will innovate rather than stagnate.
 7. Positive Personal Destiny: Destiny is a fact. Instilling a positive outlook and purpose of self worth creates lasting confidence and drive that will constitute success in life.

Conclusion

Education needs a refreshing movement in our society. Our youth who we have neglected to foster and state care can no longer be marginalized. Our economy needs more than stimulation. Our economy needs sustainability. Our communities need to reconnect from within. YRAC Schools can provide a solution to these issues. Through the Seven Pillars of Success that will be embodied in each youth coming out of our institution, we will produce a legacy of citizens that will bring our society to its natural state of external and systemic beauty. We would be immensely grateful from your support. There are a few ways to support YRAC schools. The first way is to support by action via investing money, time, or other resources. Secondly support us through your words by telling others and encouraging them to join this cause. The last way is to support by your prayers for us and our youth to succeed and become pillars for our society tomorrow. Investing in our youth is investing in our future. YRAC Schools is the most innovative and empowering method to make that investment reap massive benefits.
